A tale of two scales: formant-based and self-voiced measures of vowels, consonants, and CV combinations. This study examined the reliability and validity of the formant measures developed by Schwartz and colleagues in estimating the frequency, intensity, and duration of productions of a prototypical set of vowels, consonants, and combinations of those two units. Participants were 59 male speakers of American English who were selected to represent most of the variation in speakers with respect to age, gender, ethnicity, and fluency. Observers and recordings were used to verify and quantify the estimates of the frequency, intensity, and duration of the productions, which were then used to calculate the F0, F1, and F2 frequency, intensity, and duration of productions for each of the stimuli. The results confirmed the reliability and validity of the Schwartz-derived measures, but showed that, with some interventions, the measures based on self-voicing and formants better reflected the actual duration, intensity, and frequency of these productions. The implications of these findings for the measurement of duration, intensity, and frequency in speech production are discussed.

Wangchen Yidam Wangchen Yidam is the supreme protector Lama of the Nyingma school of Tibetan Buddhism. He is also called Wangchen Sengge Mogur () by the Ngagpa people, a regional ethnic group of Kham. Historically, Wangchen Yidam was the 15th in a line of guardians of the Nyingma or "Ancient" school of Tibetan Buddhism. His family was originally from Kham and associated with the Jonang teachings. The Wangchen lineage originated during the eleventh century. In 1147 the 17th Gyalwang Karmapa met with the lineage holder Wangchen Yidam, who was then the very young son of the 8th Gyalwang Karmapa. He was a man of immense charisma and was known as "The Yellow Robe." He was the eldest son of the 6th Gyalwang Karmapa, who was born in Langdarma, Kham, Tibet. When he was nine he was consecrated to be the 15th
